Age Appropriate Pedagogies

- are research supported pedagogies effective at engaging children and achieving learning outcomes in the early years.
- The Easter Bilby Adventure strongly implements;
  - a blend of play based learning and direct teaching AAP approaches
  - active, scaffolded, playful, language rich and dialogic, and narrative AAP characteristics
Overview

Experience powerful learning for students where the child is immersed in the narrative of Easter Bunny being too old to do his job anymore. (PROBLEM). Who can now care about others and share? Evidence needs to be collected for solutions to be considered as part of a sense of agency for children.

Students become hands-on, minds-on problem solvers as they are guided through the forest experiencing, connecting and enabling their learning via several authentic issues. In class students continue researching the issues, creating burrows, focusing on native animals, exploring endangered animals at a deeper level. Importantly there are opportunities to extend learning beyond the classroom into the school community with planning and enacting events and actions on issues to make a difference as part of being an effective learner.

Early years teachers love the life like problem solving, integration with classroom learning and the inquiry approach to learning.
